

LESSON - 11

Dignity grows Out of work

NOTES:

Summary:

Chetan was the only son of his parents. He grew to be a lazy man. He had been unwilling to work because he thought manual labour was for lowly people. To teach him a lesson his father offered him five thousand rupees per month for taking up his occupation. But Chetan laughed at his occupation which made the old man extremely shocked. At the end, he regretted for humiliating his father when he realized that the toils of his father had been supporting their family. He also came to know that every work is for the good of all and no work is higher nor lower than another work. Only how well one works is really counted. So, he learnt his lesson and decided to accept his father's offer only to show his love for them.
